contulit lapidem ipsum mea causa Iac. Yates amicus venerabilis nunc defunctus scripsitque v. 1 tantum OT, v. 2 PANN, v. 3 M P X sibi clare apparuisse, reliqua omnia incerta esse. Tamen puto fore ut oculi in titulis legendis exercitati plura legant. V. 2 loci alicuius nomen videtur latere.

1169 Columna grandis (alta ped. 3 dig. 6, in circuitu ped. 5 dig. 7), rep. a. 1771 prope Thurmaston, (a hamlet of Barkby), not far from where the present road from Leicester to Melton (the great London road to Loughborough REYNOLDS) passed from Fosseway. Servabatur primum in Thurmaston, in the garden of the turnpike house near the place where it was found. Reperta est in loco antiquo; operae enim in via sternenda occupati offenderunt in a heap of stones set in lime, so hard as to baffle their eagerness to demolish it; id pro basi erat miliario. Delatum est ad Leicester, ubi extat in foro publico.

LXXII. VIAE ORAE OCCIDENTALIS.

Viam fuisse a Coccio (supra cap. XXI) Bremetennacum (cap. XXVI) vidimus supra (p. 72); ad eam pertinent miliarii n. 1171—1175. Ab hac diversa est the Maidenway, i. e. via Eburaco Luvallium (v. supra p. 73); ad quam rettulerim miliaria Brovonacense (n. 1176) et ad Hesket repertum (n. 1177). Contra quae prope Old Carlisle prodierunt duo

(n. 1177. 1178) ad viam orae occidentalis alteram videntur referenda esse, quam Bremetennaco per Calacum (cap. XXVII) ad Old Carlisle (cap. XXXI) fuisse probabile est; in itinero vero non describitur. De huius regionis itineribus videatur inter alios Ioh. Just assoc. journ. 8, 1853 p. 35 ss.

1171 These letters are on the side of a peice of a round pillar ffound att Riblecester this last summer and seene by me the 12 of 9ber 1612, but ther is other letters theron which I cannot expresse, by reason of my unexperiencie in thes kind of antiquities DODSW. Riblechester; the form of this looks somewhat like a milliary pillar; it was lying in a garden at the west end of the town, and near the river. So much of the inscription is quite effaced as makes it hard to guess at the meaning of the whole HORSL.

'I believe this inscription has not been published before, for I don't find it in Dr. Leigh's natural history' Horsleius; sed apud scriptorem illum p. 7 pilae alicuius miliariae mentionem fieri Gough observat.

'The letters at the bottom are so confused, I can make nothing out of them' Horsleius, qui initio aut Commodi aut Caracallae nomina latere posse putabat. Non spoponderim eandem esse atque Dodsworthii; sed cum nulla praeterea Coccii innotuerit columna miliaria, neque obstant litterarum vestigia ab Horsleio visa, fieri potest ut eadem sit. Ante versus Horsleii tres ultimos spatium est versuum fere decem.
